

Definition of a CPC:

CPCs are anti-abortion organizations posing as real medical facilities with the intention of shaming, scaring, and deceiving people out of accessing comprehensive reproductive health care services.

Characteristics of CPCs:

- Linked to right-wing, religious, & anti-abortion organizations.
- Don't provide legitimate, regulated medical care. from qualified providers
- Receive state and federal funding.

Tactics and Goals of CPCs:

- Prevent people from accessing abortion or delay care until it is too late to access one
- Uphold religious beliefs
- Spread misinformation
- Share minimal resources
- Target minoritized individuals and communities
- Advertise "free services" (pregnancy tests, "counseling")
- Set up near actual abortion clinics to intentionally deceive and mislead people seeking healthcare

Legality and Funding of CPCs:

The so-called North Carolina "Women's Right to Know" Act (2011) blatantly inserts biased, state-mandated scripts into reproductive decision-making and mandates that anti-abortion groups are in a directory with legitimate providers.

North Carolina has a history of giving taxpayer dollars to CPCs.

In 2018, NC allocated $1.55 million taxpayer dollars to CPCs.

In 2021, the new state budget passed that dramatically increased CPC funding to over $18 million in public funds.
